HOME REPAIRS

“Enhancing our youths’ competitive edge through merit badges”
Nothing encourages pride in one’s surroundings more than being able to improve them through one’s own initiative and resources.

That is why the Home Repairs merit badge can be so important to the development of a young person. Once a Scout learns basic home repair skills and applies them to his own environment, he will have a lifetime resource: his ability to learn new skills.

Home repair, however, can be intimidating at first, especially if the Scout lacks a role model for such activities. If possible, provide one-on-one or group activities that will get the Scout off to a good start.

Encourage each Scout to acquire a good set of basic tools, and help Scouts learn to keep their tools in one place and in good repair. That way, they will “be prepared” to handle repairs as needed.

There is no time limit for completing the requirements. Major tasks, such as waterproofing a basement, may be completed in tandem with another Boy Scout working on the requirement, and/or with the assistance of an adult. The majority of the work, however, should be performed by the Scouts earning the badge.

This book provides a good overview of home-repair projects, but it is by no means a complete reference. For some requirements, space does not permit going into construction details or listing all possible repair variations. Therefore, any new construction or installation or completion of a similar project (for example, any toilet repair or adjustment) qualifies as achieving the requirement so long as the Boy Scout understands and demonstrates the basic concepts involved.
