OVERVIEW & KEY FINDINGS
The Main Story for Spring 2012:
The Scouting program was viewed positively, but inconsistent or poor delivery of the program is frequently mentioned as the cause of a negative experience.

Program Feedback

- Parents & volunteers believe worthwhile values are being reinforced and it is the best program around to become successful in life.
- Scouts’ perception is that they learn life skills, advancement aspects are great and they resonate with feeling as if they are part of something bigger.

Delivery Feedback

- Better organization and general improvements in troop and den meetings.
- Improved leadership through better support, simplified steps, and recruiting more leaders are recommendations made by all groups.
- More relevant and improved training to volunteers.
- Cut the paperwork and red tape in program administration.

YOUTH FEEDBACK
CUB SCOUTS
Cub Scouts: Key Findings

- Creating experiences for Cubs that would drive them to recommend Scouting to their friends is overwhelmingly dependent on the delivery of fun at den meetings and other organized events.

- The importance of having fun supersedes all other situations for Cubs and is four times more important than any other activity reported.

- The second highest driver of the member experience is learning new things in den meetings.

- While definitive statements from the Cubs are not directly reporting the delivery of the program being a problem, there is anecdotal evidence that it is impacting the experience in Scouting in a fundamental way.
Cub Scouts: Bright Spots & Opportunities for Improvement

What is Working

- Eighty-five percent of respondents agree that their Scouting experience is really fun.
- The Program appears to continue to generate excitement about earning badges with 83 percent of Cubs.
- Seventy-six percent agree that they do learn new things in den meetings.

What Needs Improvement

- It’s Boring: About 90 percent of Detractor comments complained about gatherings being un-stimulating.
- Infrequent Outdoor activities: While 68 percent agree the outdoor activities are great, 39 percent noted the frequency and reach of outdoor activities warrants attention.
- Bullying Exists: While 74 percent agree that boys in their group are not mean, the 26 percent who are neutral or disagree gave alarming comments on this topic.

Cub Scouts:

Cub Scouting is fun.

Comment Summary:

- Thirty-five percent of respondents noted camping and activities as being an important part of Scouting: It is either a highlight or they want more of it.
- Eleven percent stated as having great experiences.
- Eleven percent noted that the meetings were boring.
- Seven percent talked about gaining friends.

Comments

- Agree (86%)
  - I get to relax & do thing like normal kid does like playing in the dirt when we’re camping instead of one fieldtrip a year to the farm & we are not allowed to touch anything.
  - I would give this two strongly agrees if I could because it is really fun when we get to go camping with our mother or father.
  - Den activities are fun but the parents are always yelling. Pack meetings are too kiddish.
  - I thought it was boring at the beginning of the year. Now I think it is fun b/c I get to draw pictures and play games and stuff.

- Neutral (13%)

- Disagree (1%)

Comment Summary
• Fifty percent of respondents noted as having an experience that was fun and cool, yet some ten percent claimed it to be boring

Comments
- I love my Scout Scrap Book we made in our meeting. I add pictures of stuff I do in Scouts and to earn my badges & awards. You can look at it and see how cool Scouts is. I take it to school everyday. All the kids at the YMCA want a book like mine.
- We don't really learn. We do art stuff and I already knew how to count money. I did like visiting the fire station and we visited the radio station this week.
- Some meetings have lots of learnings, others not. Lots of learning goes on at home when working on the achievements.
- I learn more from outdoor activities.

Comments

Not as many outdoor activities as I thought there would be.

Need more outdoors activities that does not cost as much.

Like camping trips, and we play games outside.

Only thing outside was a camp out. The only thing to do was the campfire. The rest of the time families had to walk around the park by themselves.

BOY SCOUTS & VENTURERS
Scouts & Venturers: Key Findings

- Boy Scouts have the second lowest NPS score of 34 percent with just half the respondents being Promoters of the program.

- Those that stated they are no longer members have a much higher loyalty level with an NPS score of 67 percent.

- Older Scouts reported a 22 percent higher NPS than the younger Scouts. The disconnect might be found in the way the most impactful driver activities are being experienced for each:
  - For more mature, older Scouts they have more of a perspective of how an appreciation and awareness of learning life skills is applicable to success in life.
  - With perspective to younger scouts, outdoor activities are a more important value driver for them than for older Scouts.
Scouts & Venturers: Bright Spots & Opportunities for Improvement

What is Working

- Boy Scouts reported high levels of satisfaction with the program.
- Seventy-five percent agree that being in Scouting makes them feel like they are a part of something bigger than themselves.
- They see the value in Scouting from a development perspective.
- Eighty-two percent agree that Scouting activities are of interest to them.

What Needs Improvement

- Wasted Time & Disorganization: Only 52 percent of Scouts indicated that meetings are a good use of their time.

The Number One Improvement: Scouts noted a need for improvement in leadership and leadership training.
Boy Scouts/Venturers have the second lowest NPS score at 34 percent with just one-half the respondents being Promoters of the program.

Comments
The Scouting community is huge, I especially realize this after taking part in the VOA and going to NOAC/ OA High Adventure Bases.
I do feel I’m part of an organization that spans the world. And through this organization I have many things in common with people in my city, state, country, and around the world that I wouldn’t have had in common without Scouting.
Working at the Regional level of the Venturing program has given me a glance into the bigger picture of things. There is much more than meets the eye in everything that we do.
I recognize that there is scouting across the world, and witnessed it firsthand at Jamboree. I find out friends I never knew were boy scouts are involved in the program, but I feel like the troops are too individual, like there is little to no connection between the troops.
Boy Scouts & Venturers: Our meetings are a good use of my time.

Comment Summary:
- Thirty-three percent of respondents noted the meetings as a waste of time, boring, too long and unorganized.

Comments:
- Not really. School is a priority in high school and again, when first starting it was OK to do it every week but somehow the program is always predictable and not of interest after the fifth time you've done it.
- Now that I am in high school, sometimes it is more important to get my homework done than to be at the meeting, particularly if I am not going on that month's camping trip.
- I have just about everything done now working towards my eagle. The rest of the troop is now working on things the younger scouts need. There's only so much I can do and often find myself being bored and having nothing to do at the meetings.
- Not all meetings are productive. I am disappointed when I go to a meeting that is not productive because I also have school work to do.
- Every scout meeting helps me become a better troop member, but some meetings are a waste of time, and I could have done other things instead, like doing homework or getting an earlier bedtime.
Boy Scouts & Venturers: My parents are very supportive of the Scouting program.

- Agree: 93%
- Neutral: 6%
- Disagree: 1%

Comments

- That is the key to my success.
- My parents are extremely involved. They help run a crew, a troop, and a ship.
- They are pushing me for my eagle. They may never truly know how much that means to me.
- They take me to events, but they strongly disagree (as I do) with the BSA's discriminatory policies against gay kids and leaders.

I only am who I am today because of Scouting.

I can even begin to describe how valuable scouting skills are.

Leadership, outdoorismanship, and the survival/first aid skills I have learned are extremely useful.

Life Scout was denied many times, and rightfully so, now I understand because of teachings.

Comments
- We do a good percentage of our activities outside.
- It wouldn’t be scouting without outing.
- My team hardly ever does outdoor Activities. No money and adults don’t want to go either.
- My crew is becoming more involved in the outdoors, but they still need more training. My troop camps every month.

Comments

- I would like to see some older scout activities, maybe for crews, like paintball, and laser tag.
- I love what the OA program offers because it combines service, fellowship and camping.
- From early advancement to now I’ve always enjoyed every meeting and activity.
- Our troop is truly 'boy lead' and we do only the things we want to do.

Comments
- Most are dedicated and could benefit from more excitable members of the body of the crew.
- They often do better than some of the adult leaders.
- I know they are in capable hands and will become capable hands themselves.
- I respect the positions they fill, and more often than not respectable youth are chosen to fill them.

Please Note: Comment key word analysis is limited to the two highest impact driver questions in each segment audience.
Boy Scouts & Venturers: If there is one thing that I would suggest to improve Scouting, it would be...

1. Scouts noted leadership and leadership training.*
2. Scouts mentioned the costs being too expensive and there being too much focus on money.
3. Scouts wrote that more activities were needed and of higher quality & more organized.
4. Scouts noted that the meetings are meaningful but need to be outside more often.
5. They wrote that they wanted more camping.
6. Scouts said they would change nothing.

* Improvements in descending order according to frequency of use percentages.

Comments

Never lose focus of the mission - THE BOYS! BSA does a phenomenal job, just never lose focus.

More oversight from Council of leaders so Troops are not so different and leadership is consistent.

I would like to see a wider range of activities to attract more people to make it less 'nerdy'; maybe more modern and mature activities so the older guys will want to stay in it.
CUB SCOUT PARENTS
Cub Scout Parents: Key Findings

- Cub Scout Parents have the lowest levels of member satisfaction and loyalty with an NPS of 31 percent.

- While just over half of the Promoters provided comments that were largely positive related to program and delivery, 61 percent of Detractors provided additional comments describing the experience as boring, not organized, disappointing, not satisfying or not fun.

- Non-current Cub Scout Parents had a significant story related by Detractors (49% of the 767 respondents). Ninety-seven percent of their comments were negative about the program, experience, cost or communication.
Cub Scout Parents: Bright Spots & Opportunities for Improvement

What is Working

• Over 80 percent of parents agree that Scouting provides activities that their son/s enjoy.
• Parents made comments about Scouting being a positive learning experience, rewarding and good at developing character.

What Needs Improvement

• A Structured, Rewarding Time: The most important fulfillment for Cub Scout Parents is feeling that Scout meetings are a good use of their sons’ time.
• Unique Skills Development: Less than 50 percent of parents agree that “my son learns skills in Scouting that he could not learn anywhere else”. This statement also had the lowest overall agreement than any other survey question for Cub Scout Parents.

The Number One Improvement: Cub Scout Parents stated more leadership was needed along with better trained adults and improved Den Leaders.
Cub Scout Parents have the lowest levels of member satisfaction and loyalty with an NPS of 31 percent.

Den meetings are great. Anything with the pack is excruciating. So long and drawn out. The kids in my sons den get bored and end up not paying attention and the parent are even more bored.

Agree - meetings are the biggest challenge as a leader - making them relevant and fun - our volunteer leaders make or break the program

For the most part they are a total nightmare

Our Den Leader and Cub Scout Leader did not provide many rich scouting experiences/activities. Weekly meetings lacked content.

- Although it seems social pressure has created changes since I was in scouts. The values reinforced are different in some ways from the organization's original intent.
- I appreciate emphasis on citizenship but religion is overemphasized. The national organization's stance on homosexuality is inappropriate and discriminatory.
- Again, the program calls for it, but I find this pack to allow very disrespectful behavior.
- When I am disappointed from a poor decision from my Scout, I can always fall back on asking if this behavior would be acceptable in Scouting.... they both know when they do wrong.

- A lot of the kids that drop out of the scouts is because it takes a lot of money.
- Absolutely. So many extra-curricular activities are outrageous and we just can't afford them. This is just right and we can contribute through fund raisers.
- Activities and membership are very inexpensive. Uniforms are pricey.
- Many of the functions are too expensive for us to afford to attend.

- The handbook has me introducing him to things that I would not have known he is ready for.
- It’s great that he has learned the Pledge of Allegiance (which he won’t learn at school).
- He learns skills from the leader and other scouts that he doesn’t get at home, with myself being a single mother and him being an only child.
- If he were not learning these skills in scouts, he would learn them at home or in 4-H.

- Better training and guidance for new leaders to make sure they have a game plan and are confident in leading their den. That is the best way to ensure the boys are getting the best experience.

- For families that do not have the income or are on fixed income it is extremely expensive to participate in everything. My son misses out on some of it just because we don’t have the money.

- Less is more! I think there should be more focus on having higher quality events and activities and things the boys need to do to earn badges. There is just too much going on and particularly for younger boys.

- While I think it is an amazing program, our church has a program called Duty to God that I feel is even better at teaching boys how to be successful.
- Everything in moderation. He is involved with other organizations too. The combination is what we hope will make him successful in life.
- If the program were run as it is intended I would agree. If not run in a way to allow the boys to lead and be challenged and to serve, then no.

Scout meeting are a good use of my son’s time.

Comment Summary:
- Fifty-three percent of Boy Scout Parents indicate the Scout meetings are boring, unorganized, a waste of time, not productive, and needed more structure.

Comments
- Meetings tend to be disorganized and inefficient. I understand boy-led, but there should be more direction from adults.
- Since our troop is boy-led, there are times when play becomes a large part of the agenda. But, most of the time skills are taught.
- Often, there is no agenda ahead of time. To me, this indicates no planning, no thought, and an unproductive meeting.
- Totally inefficient!!! A waste of time, a bunch of adults running around in costumes.

There are always those around who have been with Scouting forever to answer questions and guide us.

The web presence needs a bottom-up overhaul.

Info on the web is expansive but not easy to navigate through. We have found inconsistencies. Our council is in another country and not easily accessible.

I find the websites confusing and too many layers to get to the information I need.
Boy Scout Parents: If there is one thing that I would suggest to improve Scouting, it would be...

1. Boy Scout Parents noted that leadership needed more/better training, guidance & support.

2. Parents stated that the cost was too expensive and that fees needed to be lowered.

3. They mentioned the need for better communication.

4. They wrote about advancement and merit badges and rank advancement.

5. Parents noted that forms/paperwork needed to decrease, as well as improving the website and there being too much bureaucracy.

* Improvements in descending order according to frequency of comments.

Comments

- Council involvement in ensuring the troop runs as it is supposed to. Attend some troop meetings and committee meetings. No one from Council has ever attended a meeting. Leaders do not have training and do not run troops as it should.

- Look harder at the individuals volunteering as leaders & how they operate their troops. There are a lot of excellent troops out there but the few that are not are going to make a bad name for the good ones. Council needs to take action on those troops.

- More information disseminated about ranking and how to achieve ranking; maybe even setting up milestones for the kids.

- The amount of merit badge offerings is wonderful! We would like to see more opportunities to earn merit badges from our council. We have had to look to other councils, parks and rec, business, etc. in order to complete merit badges.

- The program needs to be updated, there is a lot of planning and working on projects, merit badges, etc. but needs a little more fun or it just feels like you’re in school.
CHARTERED ORGANIZATIONS

Leadership is of such excellent quality that they must invest in training & encouraging new leadership at first supplement & in the long run, replace them. It all goes down the drain without sacrificial, committed and talented individuals.

See if the cost of the awards could be reduced. Each boy wants to earn the awards but the cost takes moneys that could be used for activities. One year we spent $1200 on awards alone for the Boy Scouts. This did not include the Cubs.

Make sure the mandatory uniforms are 'Made in the USA' and not China, that is a disgrace, it's the Boy Scouts of America, we promote honesty and duty to our country. We are not showing that to the boys when we buy cheap materials in another country and still charge abhorrent prices for the uniforms.
YOUTH-FACING VOLUNTEERS
Youth-Facing Volunteers: Key Findings

I no longer feel my son has to belong in several different activities, Boy Scouts encompasses a wide range both physical and team oriented but also teaches them negotiating skills, community service. In our unit the boys make decisions & vote on activities meals etc. he has done a full 360 & works excellent now in a group setting.

By far I know that. My two Eagle Scout sons have never been in trouble, have certainly been blessed with great jobs because of the Scouting program/Eagle Scout awards, etc. and are outstanding citizens and young men.

We were starting to develop some excellent programs toward empowering youth, youth development and leadership skills recommended by the BSA toward a 'Boy Led Troop'. They were not valued, disappeared and now the Scoutmaster administers all activities rendering any assigned roles of leadership meaningless.

Comments
- I all too often find myself surrounded by untrained and inexperienced adult leaders. It is a constant struggle for me as I find myself playing too many roles that take my 100% attention away from the youth we serve.
- I strongly agree I have support from the 3 other Venturing leaders, but we're too shallow of an organization to rate this any higher. We need to exponentially grow our adult leadership organization. I expect this metric to be very different a year from now.
- The number of members in the pack have been depleted because the district has allowed too many packs in one area. This limits the volunteers and ultimately the help I can get. There is really only 2 of us running the pack and we will be gone by the end of 2012.

They're useful ways to get information out, but they're certainly not critical to day to day work with the youth.

Roundtables do not adequately train anyone! As a matter of fact most folks at the district/council level do not provide reasonable or relative to 'real world' scenario situations.

Many times they are boring

Roundtables have been very helpful - although they were a bit overwhelming at first.

Youth-Facing Volunteers: If there is one thing that I would suggest to improve Scouting, it would be...

1. Respondents stated that leadership was lacking and more leaders were needed and that the steps need to be simplified.
2. They noted that the program is great but need updating.
3. Respondents think the costs are expensive and want lower fees.
4. They mention that there needs to be more data sharing and communication.

* Improvements in descending order according to frequency of comments.

Comments

- Make it easier to enjoy being a leader. Simplify the training, cut costs for the leaders, and streamline the system.
- Better data sharing in a timely and effective manner. We don't have access to accurate timely membership lists, we don't get info on upcoming events, the website is hard to navigate, no shared knowledge base, no way to share information easily.
- Create awareness through national advertising. There should be enough supporters in influential places to make this happen at a free to reasonable cost.
- Uniform and consistent training and leadership. It seems as though the program varies widely depending on whom you are dealing with. That's not entirely bad, but I prefer greater uniformity across the board.
COUNCIL & DISTRICT VOLUNTEERS
Council & District Volunteers: Key Findings

- The second highest NPS of all segments with 56 percent being net promoters.
- Almost all comments provided are positive about the program from Promoters, Passives and Detractors alike.
- Volunteers are less enthusiastic about the delivery of program quality and the council’s responsiveness to volunteers.
- However, Detractors cite the experience being frustrating, the process is bureaucratic and the time commitment being too large.
Council & District Volunteers: Bright Spots & Opportunities for Improvement

What is Working

• Ninety-six percent District and Council Volunteers understand and believe in the unique benefits that Scouting provides to youth.
• Seventy percent state they have the tools and resources to be an effective volunteer.

What Needs Improvement

• Serving Volunteer Needs: Volunteers are split on agreement that the organization is responsive to their needs.
• Goal Orientation: Forty-three percent do not agree that committee/board is accomplishing its goals in a timely manner.
• Council Support: Sixty-three percent agree that the district/council is doing everything it can to deliver quality programs; however, problems exist such as more training is needed and improvement is needed in the program.

The Number One Improvement: Council-District Volunteers stated that the communication needs to be more effective with a better delivery of relevant information.
With the second highest NPS of all segments at 56 percent, almost all comments provided were positive about the program.

- The necessary training and support are not always readily available (or obvious) to a volunteer taking on a new position.
- The attitude that the volunteer is there to serve the council prevails whereas it should be the opposite.
- It can be a struggle to get simple resources like contact information of other volunteers with whom I need to interact.
- The tools I have are more of a result of past Troop leadership than Council leadership.

- While we can always improve this office emphasis customer service and making sure the volunteers leave with a smile.
- The council is not responsive enough to all the changes occurring that will shape its future.
- I feel the council is all about fund raising and recruiting, forgetting about program.
- A volunteer merely needs to ask the Council professional staff or key volunteer leadership team if any assistance is required. They are very responsive!
Council & District Volunteers: If there is one thing that I would suggest to improve Scouting, it would be…

1. Council-District Volunteers stated that communication needs to be better and that there needs to be more information.

3. In terms of cost, there needs to be lower fees and prices.
4. They noted that training needs to be more efficient and simplified.

Comments

Focus on recruiting more adult volunteers. It would allow for more effective and happier leaders which will lead to more membership of youth.

Train the professionals to better utilize their volunteers which in turn would help them to achieve their goals. It shouldn't always be about the money. Also reduce turnover at the District Executive level. There needs to be stability.

Find a way to make it affordable for those boys/families that could most benefit.

Research Background

Research Method
This project was designed as exploratory research to collect primary data using a structured design. Using a “SPSS 19” software package, several formal quantitative analysis procedures were employed to analyze the data. These included exploratory factor analysis, factor analysis, reliability analysis, regression analysis, frequency analysis and text analytics.

Survey Instruments
The survey questions, both NPS™-type and value drivers, are the result of an extensive vetting process that began with the help of professionals and volunteers in four councils. These results, plus information from years of national council research, provided the basis for questions for a nationwide pretest conducted in May 2011. Questions were further refined from a pretest with eight councils in a July 2011 pilot program, with twelve to fifteen questions for each segment included in the pilot survey. Based on results using quantitative analysis processes, the questions were finalized to seven drivers plus an NPS-type for each segment.

Timeframe
Data were gathered from March 14, 2012 through April 6, 2012

Population
Responses were solicited from seven customer segments: Cub Scouts (through their parents), Cub Scout parents, Boy Scouts and Venturers (under 14 through their parents), Boy Scout & Venturer parents, Youth-Facing volunteers, Council/District volunteers and Chartered Organization representatives.
