Dear Friends,

The United Methodist Church has long been an active partner with the Boys Scouts of America because of our long-standing agreement with the values and direction Boy Scouts give to young men across this country. Our churches have long recognized the importance of the scouting program in proclaiming and demonstrating Christian values in boys and young men. The Boys Scouts of America are a tremendous resource to our churches in helping them in their ministry to the youth of their churches and the youth of their respective communities.

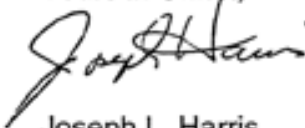

We have been very proud the last few years to lead the country in the number of Boy Scout members affiliated with churches. We hope that this is just a beginning as we seek to expand our scouting ministry to more churches in more locations across the country. With the BSA emphasis in leadership development, fostering an appreciation for God and the created order, encouraging civic responsibility and social involvement and helping in shaping young men's moral and ethical values, we feel that the Boys Scouts of America is an organization that we want to encourage all our young men to consider joining.

We continue to be grateful to the countless number of United Methodists who have given many volunteer hours to the scouting ministry. It is through their dedication and leadership that scouting continues to grow in the United Methodist Church. My own experience as a scouter and the experience of my son as a scouter reminds me of the rich heritage, training and experience that scouting can bring to individuals. I know of no better program to help prepare boys to deal with the pressures and temptations of the world they will face, than scouting.

I look forward to the continued expansion of the scouting ministry within the United Methodist Church. As we seek as a church to touch the lives of young people morally, spiritually, emotionally, and physically, scouting will continue to be an important tool to accomplish this objective.

May God continue to bless the work of the Boys Scouts of America.

Yours in Christ,

Joseph L. Harris

Overcoming Objections To Organizing a New Unit

1. We already have a youth program.

It's great that your organization cares about its youth (and the youth of the community). Scouting is ideal to work hand in hand with existing programs to enhance what you currently offer. Not only are our goals/values compatible, but our methods can/will work well with what you do. Scouting can bring programs and facilities to you to make a good program even better.

2. We tried Scouting once and it didn't work.

What do you feel was the reason? (Explore – look for the biggies – lack of organization/commitment, uncommitted or poor leaders, lack of training, lack of vision, poor support from district/council/BSA.)

Address each issue:

Organizational Commitment – Starts at the top – the strong commitment of your (head, board, etc.) will be contagious.

Leaders – Use selection, not recruiting – get often and get the very best in organization (after all, it's your program), train them and then support them!

Vision – Be creative about how to serve the youth of the organization; have a community dream and then implement the dream.

BSA Issues – Assume it won't happen again – promise and deliver.

3. We don't have any youth in our organization.

Scouting provides a means for your organization to become known in the community, especially among families with children of Scout age. It's great advertising and community goodwill. In addition, the Scouting program is a tremendous tool to outreach into the community and give people an opportunity to become a part of your organization.

4. We cannot afford Scouting.

The ninth point of the Scout Law states: A Scout is thrifty – he learns to pay his own way. We teach that Scouts and units should pay their own way. We provide the opportunities for troops to raise money for their use. The only cost to the chartered organizations is a charter fee of $20.

5. We don't have any space in our building for them to meet.

I understand how you feel; others have also felt that way. We have found that many are able to identify classroom meeting areas as possible meeting places for the Scouting program. Additionally, several organizations have used the resources of their members or employees to provide meeting space for meetings. The other potential solution is that of a joint chartered organization to charter the Scouting program.

6. No one knows anything about the Scouting program.

Many of our very best leaders have started out knowing little or nothing about the Scouting program. Our council provides various training courses throughout the year, roundtables and self-study materials. Subjects include outdoor skills and other topics. We also provide volunteer support for leaders to help them provide a high-quality program.

7. We don't agree with several of the Boy Scout stands on membership.

We feel that as a private organization we have a right to establish our membership requirements. I thank you for your time, but I feel that there's nothing further we can do at this time to help you.

8. We cannot charter a Scouting program because we have no leaders.

The BSA has a process to help you choose leaders. The process involves listing the characteristics required for a leadership position and then identifying individuals who fit those characteristics.

9. We cannot charter a Scouting program because our youth are mostly from single-parent families.

One of the strengths of the Scouting program is its ability to include and serve a variety of family configurations. In fact, Scouting is particularly helpful to youth from single-parent families.

10. No one has time to be a leader.

It's important that you find the time; if you don't, there are people on the streets who will find the time to spend with your child, and they may not be the type or kind of people you want your child to be around. Scouting has a program that brings families together, consisting of family camping, religious awards, etc.

11. Liability is a major concern of our organization.

The general liability policy issued to the Boy Scouts of America provides primary liability insurance coverage for all chartered organizations and participating organizations for liability arising out of their chartering of a traditional Scouting unit. Your $20 charter fee covers your organization with the liability insurance provided by the BSA.

NEW-UNIT ORGANIZATION PROCESS

1. Identify the prospect. District leaders identify a community organization prospect with the potential to operate a unit after researching the youth market and considering the most promising community organizations.
2. Approach the prospect. An influential Scouter or the district executive makes an appointment to meet with the head of the community organization or top leadership group in the organization after researching the organization and determining how Scouting can help meet its needs.
3. Make the sales call. The district executive and the unit organizer or other influential Scouter meet with the head or top leaders of the community organization to sell them on how Scouting can help meet the needs of the organization and to obtain the willingness of the organization's leaders to establish a unit.
4. Organization adopts the program. The organization formally adopts the Scouting program, confirms the appointment of a chartered organization representative, and appoints an organizing committee.
5. Organizing committee meets. The organizing committee and the new-unit organizer meet to plan the next steps for establishing the unit and complete the new-unit application. A commissioner is assigned by the district to assist the unit.
6. Select and recruit key leaders. Using BSA selection procedures, the organizing committee selects and recruits unit leaders and confirms unit committee members, and the community organization approves all unit adults.
7. Train the leaders. Unit leaders complete Fast Start training and are invited to the next basic training course and the next district roundtable.
8. Plan and organize the program. New unit leaders are trained in program planning and the first month's program is developed.
9. Recruit youth members and orient parents. Recruit youth members, hold an orientation meeting for parents and youth, and select/recruit additional adults as needed.
10. Complete the paperwork. Complete all adult and youth applications, collect necessary fees, and submit with new-unit application to the council service center.
11. Conduct first unit meeting. Unit leaders begin youth meetings with the coaching of their unit commissioner.
12. Follow up. The unit is installed with a presentation of the charter to the chartered organization.

Note: Do not delete any steps, although some steps may be accomplished at the same time without regard to suggested sequence.
